Washington Notes

New Housing Bill

The Senate has approved a $1,-050,000,000 substitute housing bill. It acted after having refused to send the measure back to committee, where it might have been killed for the remainder of this session of Congress.

The vote on final passage was 71 to 24.

Bond-Rates Bill

President Eisenhower's request for authority to raise interest rates on Government bonds has been shelved by the House Ways and Means Committee.

The committee, in a surprise reversal of an earlier decision, voted 14 to 11, to "suspend action" on the proposal for the rest of the Congressional session .

Envoy Gets New Post

President Eisenhower has nominated Walter C. Downing, currently Ambassador to Korea, to be an Assistant Secretary of State for European Affairs.

He would succeed Livingston T. Merchant, recently promoted to Deputy Under Secretary.

Visa Rule To Be Eased

The State Department will streamline procedures next January to speed the issuance of visas for persons who want to visit this country.

There are no major changes in requirements for admission. However, the new regulations ease the way for non-immigrant visits to the United States. They eliminate the requirement that the applicant be under oath.

Rights Bill Delay

House backers of legislation to broaden the civil-rights law are conceding their hopes of action this year have almost vanished.

a red-haired girl should steer clear of all shades of pink. Now we no longer think this. The red-haired girl can be stunning in a rather strong shade of pink. Too light a shade will tend to make her seem washed out.

The cosmetic companies come out each change of season with a new color of makeup. Don't indulge unless you find it pleasing. There are too many lovely colors in all kinds of makeup to choose from to slavishly follow the "latest color."

Farm Feed Preparation May Cut Production Costs

The farmer who grows and processes his own feed may be far ahead of the game.

Agricultural specialists at VPI point out that feed is one of the biggest cost items in any livestock or poultry enterprise. Reducing the feed costs means more profits, and home grown grains are one of the cheapest sources of concentrates for livestock feed.

Today it is possible to get equipment for farm use that will proportion, mix, and grind feed with a minimum of supervision, labor, and power. With elevating and conveying equipment most of the labor can be eliminated from storage, grinding, mixing, and feeding.

The specialists urge farmers who do not yet have automatic grinding and mixing equipment to consider installing it. County agricultural agents can help with planning .

Homemakers Items

Kitchen aids will last for years if you follow a few simple maintenance rules, say Extension specialists. They have these tips.

Keep a mirror-like surface on appliances by wiping them first with a damp cloth, then with a dry one. Clean a toaster's crumb - catcher, but don't stick a fork into the heating element. Use a brush and detergent, not soap, when you scour the coffee maker. Clean electric fry pans as you do your regular ones — if food particles stick, run a small amount of water in the pan, set it at 200 degrees for a few minutes, then scour away the dirt. Always follow the rules prescribed by the manufacturer. He knows the best care for his equipment.

VALUE OT FIMBER OFTEN IS NOT KNOWN BY THE FARMER

A farmer can usually give an informed guess as to how much his corn crop is worth.

But, says A. B. Lyon, associate forester at VPI Agricultural Extension Service, the same farmer may have only a fuzzy idea about the value of his timber crop. Of all the crops grown on the farm, farmers have the least knowledge of the value of their timber, Lyon says.

Timber of a particular size and species usually commands a uniform price at any one sawmill. However, when a sawmill operator buys a tract of timber, he must figure on the kind of products that will come from the trees, and how much it will cost him to get the logs to the mill or to move the mill to the timber.

Some of the factors that determine stumpage value are the size and species of the trees to be cut, efficiency of the sawmill operator, volume per acre to be cut, location, and topography of timber tract, and quality of the timber.

Lyon says if you have timber ready for cutting, or if someone has asked about buying the timber, you should contact your county agent or the nearest district office of the Virginia Division of Forestry and request a timberland examination and recommendations for management. This advice is a free service.

Have the timber marked and estimated before offering it for sale. With this information you know exactly the number of trees selected for cutting and the estimated volume in board feet for each specie of tree marked. The Virginia Division of Forestry provides this service for a small fee, or the services of a consulting forester are available at a nominal fee.

Get as many bids as possible. Ask only efficient operators to bid.

Have a written sales cotract, specifying the amount of timber to be sold, terms of sale, cutting specifications, time limit to complete the job, and other details.
